

Groundhog Day

The Fawn Class, a 4 year old preschool class at West Midland Family Center, did a shadow study in the spirit of Groundhog Day. We learned we need a light source, light, and an object to get a shadow. When we asked the children where we can find light sources, they suggested a lightbulb, the sun, car lights, and flashlights. We read in a book that night is created by a shadow. We noticed that shadows only show shapes but no details, like smiles.

Picture on Left: Snowshoeing behind West Midland Family Center, a student picks up his snowshoe to look at the shadow.

Picture on Right: Two students putting on a shadow play in our dramatic play area.

Submitted By: Emma Garner garnere@wmfc.org